TFT Builds Its Manchester Base

Tuffin Ferraby Taylor (TFT), the independent property and construction consultant, is expanding its Manchester team with the appointment of a new graduate building surveyor.

Paul Magill has a degree in Building Surveying from Liverpool John Moores University and has gained a range of surveying experience since graduation in firms such as MA Doyle Ltd and David Trowler Associates. Paul will be training to become a Chartered Surveyor while working across business services within TFT. The Manchester office, which opened in July this year, offers the full range of TFT's services including Dilapidations, Technical Due Diligence (TDD), Project Monitoring, Project Management and Sustainability consultancy.

Hugo Bradley, head of TFT's Manchester office, comments: "The Manchester office opening has proved very successful and the team has been busy working with existing retained clients while also forging links with new ones. Paul's appointment comes just four months after opening and we will be expanding the team further during 2012."

Alan Pemberton, managing partner of TFT says: "The opening of the Manchester office was and is a key part of our five year expansion plan. Many of our top clients have instructions in the North West and having an office in Manchester has enabled us to provide a more efficient service. Hugo and his team are also expanding this client base through their local presence."
